Required Revision of ODU Faculty Senate Constitution to Integrate EVMS Faculty

Description of Issue* The Old Dominion University (ODU) and Eastern Virginia Medical School (EVMS) share much in common including a strong history of collaboration; renowned experts in our respective disciplines; complementary cultures; proven track records of emphasizing diversity, equity, and inclusion; and a deep commitment to making the Hampton Roads community a better place to live. ODU and EVMS have agreed to merge, and this strategic integration will create the largest health sciences center in the Commonwealth of Virginia and a regional medical and scientific hub. Key benefits to the Hampton Roads community include strengthening the healthcare workforce pipeline, expanding biomedical and translational research, accelerating economic development, and improving access to care and mitigating health disparities. It has been agreed that there will be one faculty senate that integrates ODU and EVMS faculty.

The ODU Faculty Senate Constitution will need to be revised so that
